Maiden United was formed by Iron Maiden fans for Iron Maiden fans. Their mission is simple: to exhilarate audiences with a dynamic, energetic, and faithful recreation of an Iron Maiden show (stage-size notwithstanding).

From the early Di'Anno years, to the classic 80's era, up to the best of the Maiden's modern repertoire, Maiden United delivers the galloping bass lines of Steve Harris, note-perfect dual guitar solos of Smith, Murray, and Gers, the complex drum beats of Clive Burr and Nico McBrain, and of course, the soaring, aggressive vocal lines of the legendary Bruce Dickinson. At a typical Maiden United show, you will experience all of Iron Maiden's biggest hits, including The Trooper, Wasted Years, Run To The Hills, 2 Minutes to Midnight, The Number of the Beast, Wrathchild, Flight of Icarus, Can I Play With Madness, The Wicker Man, and many more. Maiden fans will also have fun picking out all the Maiden easter eggs hidden in their stage show.

Maiden United is composed of experienced Los Angeles musicians who are veterans of dozens of tribute bands and original projects. With thousands of hours of stage time and a professional approach to their jobs as entertainers, they grew up on Iron Maiden and have studied the band's music and performance styles. They know what they're doing.

Members of the Band

Lead Vocals: Paul Duncan

This charismatic Scotsman is a talented rock vocalist that can usually be heard on the heavier end of the music world. He has worked on a number of projects that showcase his vocal range, and he another secret weapon. It's not easy to find a singer that can live up to a Maiden fan's expectations because, let's face it, matching Bruce Dickinson is not for the faint-hearted. The first time the rest of the band heard Paul hit the high notes on Run to the Hills they knew they had found their man. Not only that, he delivers a damn good representation of Paul Di'Anno as well.

Guitars: Scott Ramsay

The other Scotsman in the band has been rocking stages on guitar in several original and tribute bands and now he gets to do his favorite as Dave Murray. Scott first saw Iron Maiden on the Piece of Mind tour and has not missed an L.A. stop. As the ultimate Maiden fan boy, he even attended 3 of 4 nights at the Long Beach Arena which became the Live After Death album. Scott came up with the band's name because "we are all united under Iron Maiden!"

Guitars: Rich Abronson

Playing the parts of guitarist Adrian Smith, Rich discovered Iron Maiden's Number of the Beast album at summer camp in the early 80's and has been an Iron Head ever since. The idea for Maiden United originated in Rich's obsessive mind during the pandemic, but the roots go back to his first high school band that covered The Trooper. Since those early keggers, Rich has played with a number of original hard rock bands over the years including LAMF, Its Me Margaret, and Dead End Sky. He also formed the popular tribute to the grunge era, X-Nation, and learned a good-sized chunk of Maiden's set list in another local Maiden tribute band.

Bass Guitar, Backing Vocals: Danny Knapp

Known as "The Melonhead", Danny is a Southern California-based musician and composer, specializing in electric and fretless bass guitar. As a not-so-secret weapon, Danny may lack the flowing mane of Steve Harris, but he knows how to plant that foot on a monitor and machine-gun an audience with Maiden's signature gallop. Unlike Steve Harris, Danny does more than mouth the words back to the audience—he actually nails the vocal harmonies. Danny is also the bass guitarist for original emo/alternative-rock band We're No Gentlemen as well as several other L.A.-based projects.

Drums: Jeff Page

As Maiden United's drummer, Jeff is the hard-hitting force who captures the complexity of Clive Burr, Maiden's first drummer, and the power of Nico McBrain. Probably one of the most in-demand drummers on the SoCal tribute circuit, Jeff currently splits his time with Nerd Halen and the original pop-punk band, Leslie Periera and the Lazy Heroes. Jeff has also played with True to Crue, and a list of Van Halen tributes. He's also performed on the Emmys with the Remotes, and he was featured on AXS' World's Greatest Tribute Bands TV show as the drummer for the incredible Alice in Cooperland.
